

So, I sort my iTunes collection according to 'Play Count'. Behold the first 64 musical artists to come up, for entertainment's sake. There are few things to note before reading the list, do don't judge me to harshly! Some tracks don't get credited every time they play for some reason, namely the Mormon Tabernacle Choir. They get much heavier airplay. I would have thought the Format and Fun. would have been higher on the list as well. Some artists, like Jimmy Eat World and Limbeck have dozens of songs come up before most of the other artists. A couple, like Nada Surf, rank high due to a technicality in that they have a track that comes up in a frequent search for another artist and the song plays, getting counted, before I change the playlist. And a couple artists rank really high due to having one or two songs, such as Garry Shyman with "Praan" and A.R Rahman & The Pussycat Dolls with their Slumdog Millionaire tune, and are my one-hit-wonders.
